the crucial point comes at the moment when a power or group of powers cries "Halt!" to the aggressor, and has enough strength to enforce the command. As General Eisenhower pointed out, the aggressor does not balk at war. He merely fears defeat.

Yet today's scene gives grave doubt that the repeated lesson has brought wisdom. Our government and the Russian government have been reviewing the chain of events that led to World War II. But the purpose of each is to accuse, not learn. Whoever wins this finger-pointing argument will have won a poor victory. For the argument only increases illfeeling and slows the progress toward peace.

There are some Americans who counsel unilateral disarmament, appeasement and even surrender as the way to peace. Others would take a chance on losing the last battle between America and an ambitious Russia rather than sacrifice the world's highest standard of living.

The Eisenhower report emphasized that a strong national defense is not the way to enduring peace. But without a strong America, the key cannot even be sought. Russia's ultimate challenge must be met and discouraged before it is offered.

It cannot be met by military might alone. It cannot be met if we would rather lower taxes than ensure our safety, or if we disarm for the sake of "the moral and social principles" which, as General Eisenhower wrote, "the U.S. has proven, twice during my Army career, to have regarded as more vital than the flood of its finest young men."

"We may not like what General Eisenhower has said. We may turn our eyes from the facts. We may think we are solving problems with petty crusades against petty obstacles. But the facts are there. They must be faced—not only by the short-sighted government officials and the vote-hungry politicians and the Henry Wallaces, but by all of us."

chief of staff in preference to President Truman.

Thurmond himself did not mention Eisenhower by name. He did tell reporters that Secretary of State Marshall is a possibility. And he said Southern politicians who are up arms over Mr. Truman's civil rights program are discussing men from various parts of the country.

They include some who might be put up by either party, the government or said.

"Truman cannot be elected," he declared.

Thurmond is chairman of a Southern governors conference committee which came here last week in a vain effort to convince Democratic National Chairman McGee that the civil rights program should be withdrawn.

New pressure was applied in Congress, meanwhile, to another of the anti-discrimination measures urged by Mr. Truman.

Seven members of the senate labor committee—five of them Republicans—called for early action on a bill to set up a permanent Fair Employment Practice Commission.

The original FEPC was financed out of the president's emergency fund. So too was a civil rights committee which made a study of the discrimination issue for Mr. Truman last year.

This prompted Senator Russell D. Ca to declare yesterday that he will join Republicans in any effort to trim the $700,000 which the House voted for a White House emergency fund in the year beginning July 1. This is $200,000 more than Mr. Truman has this year.

A senate appropriations subcommittee was considering the fund as part of the $991,518,551 independent offices money bill when Senator Reed (R-Kas) noted that the civil rights study cost $50,000.

Terminating the emergency fund "the worst possible appropriation in years," Russell said: "I'll be glad to join the chairman in any reduction in that."

Across the capitol a committee of Southern Democratic house members met to plan new strategy in their campaign against the civil rights measures. But when the meeting broke up Chairman Colmer (D-Miss) told newsmen no decisions were reached.

90 Violent Deaths in February

By United Press

Violent death stalked through Arkansas during the short month of February and snuffed out lives at the rate of more than three a day.

Ninety persons died of unnatural causes last month as compared with 77 the previous month according to records compiled by the United Press.

Traffic accidents topped the list with 30 deaths. A total of 15 persons died of burns, mostly from fires caused by exploding stoves. Nine persons ended their own lives seven were murdered, seven died of miscellaneous causes, and six were killed by trains.

The heaviest toll in a single disaster was the death of eight men in the explosion of a coal mine Feb. 8 near Glenwood.

Five servicemen were burned to death in the crash of an army B-25 medium bomber near Jasper Feb. 6. The plane crashed into a wooded peak of a mountain and burst into flames.

The largest single highway tragedy was the death of four Sulphur Springs teenagers Feb. 13. The boys, on which they were riding, crashed an automobile on treacherous, snow-covered Highway 71 near Sulphur Springs. Three of the victims died almost instantly, and the fourth died the next day.

Three persons, including three children under six years of age, were burned to death late in the month in two separate fires caused from exploding stoves.

Harvey Ruddle and Talfia Diane Ruddle, his three-year-old daughter, were burned to death when a stove exploded at their home near Newport. Mrs. Ruddle died the next day.

Almost simultaneously with the Ruddle disaster, Betty Ann Wellborn, age six, and William R. Wellborn, Jr., age four, were burned to death when an exploding stove set fire to their farm home near Pochontas. Mrs. Wellborn died the next day.

Probably the most spectacular disaster was the gas explosion which leveled and set fire to several brick buildings in downtown Pochontas. A Negro woman was crushed to death between tons of brick and mortar.

Two women were drowned when the truck in which they were riding left the highway and plunged into a lake near Lake Wales. Their male companions swam to safety.

A Fort Smith couple was asphyxiated in a tourist camp at Charleston.

Three Texarkana Negroes were killed when their car hit a truck on the Texarkana-Little Rock highway.

Ignoring weather conditions and all other hazards a splendid crowd was in attendance at the Revival in progress at the Hope Gospel Tabernacle. Great interest is being shown in this "March to God in March" Revival.

The Rev. Clarence Smith, Evangelist, spoke last evening (Tuesday) on "The Faithfulness of God in Keeping His Promises." He very forcefully and scripturally brought out the fulfillment of the first promise, that of a World Redeemer, in the sending of the Lord Jesus Christ. The promise was given in Genesis 3:15 and fulfilled some four thousand years later, exactly as promised. He also mentioned in the second promise, the prophetic promise of the descent of the Holy Spirit, which came exactly in the manner and time promised. He concluded with the scriptural and yet unfulfilled promise of a second coming of Christ. He assured his congregation that as surely as the other promises were kept, this one would be kept also.

The entire public is most cordially invited to join the crowds already attending this promising revival. There is great singing and preaching nightly at the 7:30 service, and opportunity is given for everyone to seek the Lord for whatever they need.

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS
Chicago, March 3 —(P)—Wheat dropped for losses extending to more than 3 cents while corn and oats closed with little gain and declines on the board of tradit.

In an active trade, the market had several major price swings. When a good rally developed, paced by opening bids, prices were lower. Then a good rally developed, paced by corn. However, in the last 15 minutes heavy selling knocked values down quickly, leaving the market with a weak undertone.

Wheat closed 2 to 3 1/2 lower; $2.42 1/4-2.43, corn was 1 1/2 lower to 1 cent higher, May $2.28 1/2-2.27, oats were 3/8 lower to 3/4 higher, May $1.14 higher, May $1.14 5/8-8, and soybeans were 1 to 1 1/2 higher, March $3.09.

NEW YORK COTTON
New York, March 3 —(P)—Cotton futures moved irregularly today after displaying early weakness, but ended with a gain in old crop deliveries along with short covering and New Orleans buying met only limited offerings. The market's steadiness partly reflected the growing tightness in supplies of better grade cotton.

Declines extended to more than 1 a bale as scattered liquidation and hedging met indifferent trade support.

Futures closed 50 cents to $1.15 a bale lower than the previous close.

played in a Birmingham hotel. Friends described her as an attractive red-head.

Mrs. Johnston's suit asked the court for three specific decrees:

1. To declare James E. Folsom and Christine Folsom Johnston "lawfully intermarried by a common law marriage."

2. To declare the child born "as a result of that lawful wedlock."

3. To declare the child the son of Folsom.

Mrs. Johnston in her suit alleged that she and Folsom had lived as man and wife in Alabama, Tennessee, Kentucky and Florida. She charged further that Folsom introduced her to his mother and others as the "next first lady of Alabama."

The governor, she asserted in the suit, underwent a "change of heart" after his election in 1946. The child was born in Nashville, Tenn., on April 17, 1946 and later was taken to Michigan until the Democratic primaries were over, the petition states.

After her confinement, the suit continued, Mrs. Johnston and her son went to Michigan until after the run-off primary. Folsom "in person telephoned" her the news of "his victory and had her meet him in Florida, with their son."

It was after this time, she states, that "Folsom had a change of heart and, under pressure from political advisers, disclaimed his previously acknowledged paternity of their son" and their marital relationship.

Mrs. Johnston asked no money in the suit.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. L. Putnam of Hanceville, Ala., 12 miles south of Cullman. Her father is a farmer.

has amassed his own valuable collection.

The Paganinis have received all kinds of offers for their adhesives. An Iowa youth offered to swap an old viola he discovered in his grandfather's attic for some of Paganini's stamps. Another collector offered an antiquated cello for a rare Icelandic stamp.

In 1945 Tamianka, who served as an interpreter with the OWI, met Robert Maas at a musicale in New York. They talked of organizing a quartet and immediately thought of Courte and Rosseels, their former colleagues on the staff of the Brussels Royal Conservatory of Music.

The 3rd Division, which is known as the "Marne Division" in honor of its heroic defense of the Marne during World War I, was one of the only three Regular Army divisions in existence in the second World War. During this war it participated in the initial assaults on French Morocco, Sicily, Anzio, and Southern France, and suffered more casualties than any other Infantry Division.

Men of the 3rd Division were among the first American troops to fight their way into Bizerte, Palermo, Rome, Nuernberg, and Munich during their three-and-one-half year drive from North Africa to the heart of Germany during World War II. They wear the French Fourragere in honor of their 169 days of continuous fighting from the Mediterranean to the Rhine.

The Division holds battle credits for the Tunisia, Sicily, Naples-Foggia, Rome-Arno, Southern France, Rhineland and Central Europe campaigns. It served on occupation duty in Germany until August 1946, when it returned to the United States.

AS LONG AS I LIVE

By Ione Sandberg Shriber DISTRIBUTED BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

THE STORY: Terror-stricken Ann Bancroft is convinced someone in her own household is trying to murder her and make it appear an accident. The household includes her husband Rush, a bacteriologist; Gay, Rush's attractive young lab assistant; Laurie, Ann's headstrong 19-year-old sister; Tommy, Laurie's fiancé; and Rinda, Ann's old friend and houseguest. Ann first began to suspect foul play when she discovered that someone had waxed the soles of her new shoes, evidently hoping she would slip and fall down the steep staircase at Tophill. The can of wax was hidden in her own closet. Now that Rinda is going into Cleveland, Ann asks if she'll deliver a package and a note. She writes a letter to Enos Barton, her attorney, asking him to test the can of wax for fingerprints. But when she goes to look for the wax, it is gone.

XVII

Slowly she got to her feet. Her heart was beating heavily. She moved out of the closet, into the bedroom.

Someone had taken the can of wax.

WHY?
On a sudden impulse she turned to the closet again, to look once more, to make absolutely certain she had not been mistaken. But her search was fruitless. The can of wax wasn't there.

She wondered what to do. There must be something she should do, some proper procedure she should follow. A few questions to the maids, perhaps, to find out who had been in her room this morning? Quiet questions that might tell her who had had the opportunity to take the can of wax. But she realized almost at once that would be futile. Every member of the household had been in and out of the room last night.

As for the maids—well she could ask them if they had taken it. Maybe they had—maybe Susan found the closet door standing open and seen the can of wax and returned it to the back hall broom closet where it belonged.

She drew a long unsteady breath and went to the back hall. She opened the broom closet. The closet was crowded but neat; there was a vacuum, brooms and brushes and mops, and standing against the wall on the shelf above, cans of cleaner and wax and furniture polish. There was a can of floor wax on the shelf and Ann stretched to reach it. She brought it down and tugged at the lid with cold fingers. The lid came off and she looked inside. She saw that the wax was more than half used up. This was not the can of wax that had been in her closet.

She went back to her room. She held the lid under tight control. She tried to think. Tried to marshal her forces.

Her shoes! Of course. The shoes were still in her closet, in their original box. She hadn't touched them since yesterday afternoon when she'd put them on to go to the club for lunch. The wax would still be on the soles of her shoes.

She went into the closet and got the box. She carried it out into the bedroom, crossed to the chaise longue and sat down. She took the lid from the box, lifted the tissue from the shoes.

The shoes were placed in the box as shoes ordinarily are, turned inward, the bows face to face. Gingerly she lifted them out, turned them over, looked at the soles.

There wasn't any wax on the soles. None at all. Unbelievably she scratched the leather surface with her fingernail, but there was nothing there. No wax at all nor any trace of wax. The fear crept insidiously into her body, chilling her. It was one thing to be afraid someone was deliberately planning your murder—but it was something else again to wonder if you were—if you were—

She felt rather than saw someone watching her. She looked up. Laurie was standing in the doorway.

"For heaven's sake, Ann," Laurie said almost querulously. "What are you doing? We've been waiting downstairs and Rinda's going to miss her train. What are you doing with your shoes?"

"Rinda?" Ann said. "Oh, Oh, yes. I—I'm sorry. I didn't mean to keep you waiting."
"Rinda said you wanted to send a package into town," Laurie said. "Where is it?"

"Well, it was the—the shoes," Ann said, wondering crazily how long Laurie had been standing in the doorway, watching her. "You know I told you they hurt me. I thought maybe I'd return them."

"Well, then, give them here. Rinda doesn't mind returning them?"

"It's probably horrible of me to ask her but she will be downtown and I've had them a week."

"All right, I'll give them to her. Are Tommy and I supposed to pick up the groceries?"

"If you will."

Laurie left, the shoe box under her arm, and Ann sank back in the chaise. She felt exhausted, depleted, drained of emotion. The can of wax had vanished mysteriously and now the shoes were gone. But she hadn't been able to think of anything else to say when she'd looked up and found Laurie watching her from the doorway.

If Laurie had been there more than a few seconds she'd seen Ann examining the shoes, looking for traces of the wax she knew had been there yesterday. If Laurie had put the wax on the shoes—except that she didn't dare think a thought like that! Then she reminded herself pitilessly that she could not exclude Laurie. Not yet. Laurie had the same opportunities as had the others. Laurie had possibly a stronger motive because Ann controlled Laurie's inheritance.

But it didn't bear thinking of. Madness lay in that direction. Madness.

DOROTHY DIX Teen-Ager's Woes

Dear Miss Dix: I am a girl of 15. My main interest in life is boys. Can you tell me how to attract them and influence them to pay me attention? I am an honor roll student in high school, have nice clothes. Am not good-looking, but not what you would call bad-looking. But the boys and girls ignore me and act as though I am not around.

I am a little bashful when with boys. I find it hard to start a conversation and don't talk much. Please tell me what to do.

LONESOME

Answer: My dear child, there is nothing the matter with you except your age. You are still a child and you want to act like a sophisticated woman of the world, and you are breaking your poor little heart because you can't turn the trick.

You will say, "Sally and Susie are no older than I am, yet they go around with boys and have steady dates they kid around with, and who take them out to parties and the movies, but no boy even walks me home or buys me a soda at the drug store."

That is true enough, but girls don't age alike. Some girls mature earlier than others. Many girls at your age are as much grownup and have as much education, and as much sense or lack of it, as they will ever have. But you belong in a different class. You are a student. You are developing slowly and you will be in full bloom when they have begun to wither.

Scared of boys
All of your troubles are age troubles. You are at the homey age when you have pimples and bumps, and you are all awkward legs and arms and bones. You are so scared of boys you are dumb in their presence and can't think of a word to say, and the boys overlook you because they think you are a mere babe.

But in a couple of years your skin will clear up and you will have a lovely complexion. Your figure will have rounded out so your clothes will look like a style model on you. You will have gained self-confidence because you have worked and studied and made yourself interesting. Everyone will be saying, "What a beautiful girl Mary (or Sally, or whatever your name is) has developed into!"

I know, my dear, because every woman has been through the hobby stage and knows how trying it is on a girl who wants to be grownup ahead of her time. But don't let it get you down. Just have patience and it will pass and you will be so glad that you bided your time and waited for your day to come.

Dear Miss Dix: We are two young girls of 16, very much in love with two boys who are both in college. We are in school, too. They want us to marry them and stay with them and finish our schooling, which we are thinking of doing as we are ready to settle down. Our problem is: Should we marry them, or stay at home with our parent, who are very good to us, and finish school and marry the boys later? Please give us your advice.

PUZZLED TEEN-AGERS
Answer: My earnest advice to all girls of 16 is to put off marriage until they are at least two or three years older. That is the danger age for girls when they are passing from childhood into womanhood and when they are filled with all sorts of dreams and fancies that change from day to day, and when they don't know what they want of life nor what life has to give them. It is the time of life when every girl is so sloshing over with romance and so in love with love that she can believe herself enamored of any passable-looking lad who comes her way.

I wish that every girl of that age would learn a lesson from the tragic fate of the boys and girls who made war marriages when they were mere kids that the divorce courts are now trying to undo. And when was 16 ever ready to settle down? No playtime. No chance to shop around and look the boys over before you tied up with one for good. No experience with the world. Not even time to learn how to cook and keep house. It makes one laugh at such a childish view of marriage. If one doesn't cry over it.

Dear Miss Dix: My father beats me up when he gets drunk. He forbids me to go out, and this is beginning to tell, as my friends don't ask me to go out any more. I have a friend who is very serious about me. He lives in a world of dreams and claims he cannot get along without me. He wants me to live in an apartment of my own so he can come to see me after office hours. What should I do? Leave home and get along on my own or try to stick it out and continue to be hit by my father?

Answer: Fortunately, you don't have to take either alternative, but if I were you I would rather take Father and the beating than the lad who lives in a world of dreams. There would be more chance of getting three square meals a day.

Czech Seizure Remarkably Like Hitler's Grab Which Started Second World War

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

The revision of the non-Communist nations of Europe to the Bolshevik rape of Czechoslovakia is reminiscent of the violent reaction of Hitler's seizure of Austria, which was followed by the seizure of the Sudetenland, and then the rest of the country, and finally the conquest of Europe under the banner of a new order.

Toward the close of 1938 I arrived in London looking for the solution of an important problem. This was after the Munich conference, which had been held in Munich, and I was looking for the solution of the Czechoslovakian problem. I immediately sought out the distinguished British source and asked him for his opinion on the matter. He said: "I sense a decided hardening of the British and French attitude toward Germany, but I can't put my finger on it. I shall be grateful if you will tell me whether I am right and if so what that hardening means."

"You are quite right," he replied without hesitation. "We have decided that appeasement goes out of the window. We shall use our armies if necessary."

That was to say, of course, that the two powers would use their armies to keep Hitler in hand if he started a rampage. It was the right idea but a couple of years too late. The Nazi dictator was about ready to open fire whereas an earlier display of two distinct firmness by the Allies might have prevented war.

Now with the communizing of Czechoslovakia we have reached a crucial point in a fresh world contest, which the democracies have been trying to halt by appeasement. The first reaction to the Red assault on the small democracy was the joint note of condemnation by America, Britain and France. This has been followed by a wave of anti-Soviet sentiment which has swept Scandinavia, Norway, Denmark and Sweden—all of which are in the danger zone of Red aggression—are showing their feelings by mass demonstrations and press attacks against the aggressive spread of Communism over Europe.

At the same time there has been a sudden decision to speed up the conference to consider implementation of the British Foreign Minister Bevin's proposal for a "western union" of Europe, England, France, and the so-called Benelux countries—Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg—are scheduled to meet tomorrow in Brussels to begin discussion of this sensational project. Under Bevin's plan these countries would serve as the nucleus of a larger grouping of western European democracies.

In short this would provide for a consolidation of Western Europe for mutual benefit which would include defense against Bolshevik aggression.

Meanwhile Turkey, another strategically situated country upon which Moscow has trained its big guns, has erupted into action. Fifty-six alleged Communists went on trial yesterday in Istanbul, charged with forming a society to overthrow the sovereignty of one class over another.

This is part of a general anti-Communist housecleaning which was started more than a year ago. The trial is being held in private, the prosecution maintaining that indignation against the Reds is so high that a secret trial is necessary for public order.

Such evidence of firmness by the tough Turks is of the greatest importance to defense against the Bolshevik conquest, because Turkey not only guards the passage from Europe into the Middle East but dominates the Dardanelles strait which Russia seeks in order to make herself a Mediterranean power.

So we are witnessing an all-around tightening of the defenses against Bolshevism in Europe. It not only is encouraging but gives promise that the line can be held against the Reds if appeasement is discarded.

Far from being an encouragement to war, a firm stand against Communist aggression is the sure way to prevent another global upheaval, the certain way to bring on another world war is to temporize and appease.

Snowstorm Blankets Large Section of the Midwest

Chicago, March 3—(AP)—The snow which blanketed the Midwest from the Central Rockies to lower Michigan moved into the Eastern section of the country today.

More snow also appeared in prospect for the Midwest area after a fall ranging from four to 12 inches. The Weather Bureau said there appeared no indications of immediate thaw for the snow belt.

Snow fell today over the lower lakes region and most of the New England States. Light snow also started over a wide area through the Rocky Mountains and in sections of the Northern and Central plains states. New falls were forecast for tomorrow for most of the North Central States. Rain fell in parts of Pennsylvania and in the lower Mississippi Valley.

The Midwest disrupted air, rail and motor traffic in curtailed communications. Omaha, Neb., reported the heaviest fall, 12 inches. New snow in parts of Iowa

Order Bait for County Rat Campaign

March 31, 1948 is "Kill Rats" Day in Hempstead county, and County Agent Oliver L. Adams has announced the following list of committee centers where orders may be left for the prepared bait:

H. E. Sutton Store on Blewings Road; Hunt's Store at Dooley Hill; Howard Prichard, Voc. Ag. Teacher at Spring Hill; Slim Collins Store at Spring Hill; Townsend Store at Bethlehem on No. 29; Arnold Middlebrooks, GI Home, Teacher at Palmos; L. D. Rider Store at Palmos; Hubbard Store on Palmos Road; Ottwell Store at Shover Springs; Higginson Store on No. 67 East of Hope; Miss Birdie Avery Store near Beard's Chapel; Mont Harris Store at Sweet Home; M. L. Nelson Store at Blewings; Roy Foster Hardware at Blewings; F. O. Middlebrook's Grocery at Columbus and Davis Mitchell Store at Columbus; W. M. Dillard at Saratoga; Mrs. Mary Spates Store at Fulton; Dave Odum Store at Fulton; Albert Hulser Company at Fulton; Bob Goodlett Store at Washington; Bob Goodlett Grocery on Nashville Road; Holliday Store at North Sardis; The Wolf Store at Bingen; Edwin Gilbert's Store at Cross Roads; Prof. Ira W. Harris at Clow Training School; Prof. R. H. Jaques at Blewings Training School; Monroes Samuel's Store at DeAnn; Russell Sewall, GI On-the-Farm Voc. Training Teacher, Hope; Jewell Burke Store at Antioch; Gordon Nichols Store on No. 29 road; K. G. Ratcliff Store at Sardis; Sim Davis Grocery at Macedonia, Route 1 Washington; S. V. Walker's Blue Whitherspoon Grocery near Saratoga; and Noar Marks Fulton Grocery Store.

Orders for rat bait must be placed with your committeeman and paid for by Saturday, March 20. One pound costing 65 cents should be the average farm. No orders can be accepted after March 20. The bait will arrive in Hempstead county from U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service and be distributed to the above community centers on Tuesday, March 30. Those requesting the bait may call for it at their rat bait center so that all may poison on the evening of Wednesday, March 31.

Start now to study your rat problem, advises Farm Agent Adams. Locate where they are living in the daytime and where they are feeding at night. Determine the route the rats take between these two points and decide where along this route is a good place to put out bait on "Kill Rats" day. Along walls, on sills, behind boxes, and other protected places are good locations for bait. Rats are usually comparatively inactive during the day. They feed in the evening, and are hungriest early in the evening when they first begin to feed. Bait placed along the route to the rats' regular food gives the best results. Put out more baits than you believe are needed. Many small baits are much better than a few large ones. Put out all the bait on one day. Don't put out a little each day or you will soon have a colony of rats which refuse all poison bait. Make your first swing count.

Blast-Torn Destroyer Reaches Port

Long Beach, Calif., March 2—(AP)—The blast-torn destroyer Duncan reached port today with one man dead, 14 injured and a story of valiant crew work to save their ship after an explosion 200 miles at sea.

The 390-foot ship got home under her own power. A navy tug guided her to dock. The starboard side near the stern was rent along the water line, the jagged opening being more than 30 feet long and three or four feet wide. Steel deck plates were buckled.

Immediately upon arrival the injured were taken off some by stretcher and transferred to Long Beach Naval hospital. The name of the man killed will be announced later. Six sailors were injured seriously enough for hospitalization, mostly by burns, but the navy said none was in critical condition.

Cmdr. Paul Van Leunen Jr., of Cincinnati, O., skipper of the Duncan which was based at San Diego, told newsmen that the explosion was believed to have been caused by acetylene gas from a leaking container. It occurred in the shipfitter's shop. There was only one man in the shop at the time, the man killed.

Occurring on the first deck below the main deck, the single explosion did not set off any ammunition, he said, although there was a magazine only about 50 feet away.

He said several compartments were flooded, followed by general flooding aft.

"Through the valiant efforts of the crew the water was confined to the damaged area," he said.

Capt. T. A. Smith of Taladega, Ga., commander of Destroyer Division 52 to which the Duncan belonged, said the crew "did an outstanding job and several will be cited for their work."

Cmdr. Hoppe added that with water rising crewmen worked hard deep in the damaged area, shoring up the openings with mattresses and other material to block out the water.

The 2,425-ton Duncan carried 10 officers and 247 men.

Laney Suggests New Platform for Democrats

Memphis, Tenn., March 3—(UPI)—Arkansas Gov. Ben Laney has expressed the opinion that President Truman's civil rights program is unnecessary, harmful, a threat to states' rights and ultimately, and suggested that "true Democrats" write a platform of their own at the national convention.

"The most effective way to combat this most infamous degeneracy," Laney told a Memphis civic group yesterday, "is for true Democrats of our nation to go to the Philadelphia convention this summer and write a platform of sanity and justice."

He said the anti-lynching bill would not stop lynching, the P. E. C. would not end discrimination, the poll tax is the problem of the seven states which utilize it, and that segregation is preferred to non-segregation by both white and colored persons of the south.

"It is folly to propose legislation in an effort to satisfy the demands of a few disgruntled minority groups unless there is a general need for the legislation," Laney said.

The Arkansas chief executive said the civil rights program being made in his state.

"The effect upon our social order would be far-reaching and detrimental," he declared.

Laney added that the program would bring about the complete downfall of state's rights and finally, that this is not the proper time for such reforms.

"Congress," he said, "should be busy with more important matters."
